Organic Vegan Cuisine

“ By the purity of food one becomes pure in mind;
by the purification of mind
one verily get remembrance of their own Divinity;
and by the attainment of the memory of the Divine Within all which produces sorrow is severed. ”

Chandogya Upanishad

WELCOME TO AMRITA

We Are A 100% Vegan Restaurant

From the Sanskrit word meaning "nectar" at Amrita we celebrate delicious, vegan & organic international cuisine. Through conscious, ethical and humane choices we serve food that is good for you, good for our planet and good for all of it's creatures.

Following the yogic principle of ahimsa (non-violence), a vegan diet contains no animal products.

Our menu is completely free of meat, dairy and eggs.

We source as much organic produce as we can to support the local farmers who help keep Bali pure for future generations. Our menu is about 70-80% organic and we use as many whole grains, healthy oils & natural sugars as possible.

All our food is prepared fresh & may take up to 30 mins to be served, so please order early.

Our menu is largely gluten-free. This icon indicates dishes which contain gluten. However we do use soya sauce in many dishes, which contains trace amounts of gluten.

We invite you to breathe, relax, enjoy the view & allow us to serve you as you completely let go.

A GUIDE TO CONSCIOUS EATING

Did you know that everything we put into our bodies affects not only our physical health, but also our thoughts and emotions?

Developing a greater awareness of the foods we eat can be a revolutionary first step closer to discovering an optimal diet and a return to our natural state of healthy wholeness. A journey of 1000 miles begins with just one step. Here are some helpful guidelines to make your journey towards a balanced, holistic diet easier & full of deeper understanding...

Vegetables & Fruits: Eating more fresh fruits and vegetables is essential, and whenever possible choose organic. Although organic produce is generally more expensive than commercially grown produce, it is significantly higher in its content of vitamins, minerals, trace elements, and enzymes. In addition to avoiding the detrimental effects of chemical pesticides, insecticides, fertilizers, irradiation, and produce waxes, we actually get to enjoy the “real” taste of natural foods & derive their deeply healing benefits.

Grains: Whole grains that are free from excessive processing are the life-blood of a healthy diet. Grains such as brown rice, whole wheat flour, buckwheat, whole rye & quinoa contain more fiber, vitamins, minerals, and a variety of phytochemicals. Polished white rice, white bread & other heavily refined and processed grains have been largely stripped of their nutrients. Although they fill our stomachs, they deprive us of the essential nutrients their original whole grain counterparts offer.

Oils: Not all oils are created equal. Only a few oils have the capacity to retain their nutritional value after being heated. Though naturally pressed virgin olive oil, sunflower oil, and flax seed oil are excellent with salads, they lose their healing benefits when heated & used for cooking. Actively avoid chemically extracted oils, margarine, and shortenings. Sesame, coconut, butter and grapefruit seed oil are excellent choices to cook with instead.

Sweeteners: Brown sugar, rock sugar, sugar cane, coconut sugar, palm sugar, jaggery, agave, stevia and other natural sweeteners are easily assimilated by the body & do not adversely affect blood/sugar levels. Excessive use of refined and chemically processed sweeteners like white sugar & artificial sugars like aspartame & saccharine have many harmful effects for the body.

Meat, Dairy & Eggs: A vegan diet does not include these for humane, environmental and health reasons. Inorganic meat, dairy and egg products contain harmful hormones & chemicals which disturb our body, are harder to digest, contribute to environmental destruction and come from inhumane sources.

Plant Proteins: Beans, legumes, nuts & seeds are some of the most beneficial proteins available. For optimal assimilation soak all nuts, seeds, grains, and legumes before cooking and consuming.

More Holistic Health Tips

- Heat food on a stove-top or oven. Microwaves destroy the nutritional value of foods and are a source of cancer.
 - When considering drinking liquids with foods, finish your drink at least 20 minutes before eating - then drink no more than ½ cup with meals. This prevents the dilution of digestive juices with excess liquids and helps assimilation.
 - Stop eating when you feel like you can take 5 more spoonfuls. This leaves some space in your belly at the end of your meal and will reduce over-eating, as food expands in the belly after consumption and promotes better digestion.
 - Avoid deep-fried foods or eat them sparingly, as most are cooked in saturated fats which are harmful to health.
 - Grow to love green leafy vegetables, mung beans, seaweed, coconut, miso, turmeric, sea salt, sprouts & herbal teas - they are all great for you!

MAY YOU LIVE A LONG, HEALTHY & HAPPY LIFE!
